ABSTRACT

A Task Force on Women and Girls in Education appointed in 1974 recommended that the Superintendent of Public Instruction compile resource lists of text books and other instructional media which present a positive image of both sexes and make the lists available to school districts. This bibliography was compiled to meet the needs of teachers and media specialists who are confronted with the scarcity of nonsexist materials, especially in the area of children's books. These materials were selected on the basis of recommendations and have been evaluated by one or more of the following interested groups: school district instructional materials committees, library groups, and concerned professional organizations. The bibliography lists works of primary fiction, intermediate fiction, secondary fiction, biography, nonfiction, Educational Resources Information Center documents, and source references. Each children's book is assigned a recommended reading level. "Primary" is generally for kindergarten through third grade, "intermediate" generally for fourth grade and up, "secondary junior high" for seventh grade and up, and "secondary senior high" for tenth grade to young adult. Preface

The Superintendent of Public Instruction is committed to the goal of equality of educational opportunity.

A Task Force on Women and Girls in Education appointed by Dr. Frank Brouillet in 1974, recommended that the Superintendent of Public Instruction "compile resource lists of textbooks and other instructional media which present a positive image of both sexes and make the lists available to school districts."

The bibliography was compiled to meet the needs of teachers and media specialists who are confronted with the scarcity of non-sexist materials, especially in the area of children's books. These materials were selected on the basis of recommendations and have been evaluated by one or more of the following interested groups: school district instructional materials committees, library groups, and concerned professional organizations.

Please note that all material should be examined before purchase to assure that they are appropriate to the desired objectives and in compliance with the district instructional materials policy (RCW 28A.58.103).

We hope that these selections will be useful to you as an introductory resource which will help both teachers and students develop a sensitivity to "men and women, and boys and girls as persons responding to situations without being restricted by role expectations."

Intermediate	-	generally for 4th grade and up
